I am sure Command Sergeant Major Shipley would agree, his honorable career would not have been possible if not for the support of his wife, Judy, and son, Cody. To them, we are also grateful.

I know I am joined by all of my colleagues in the Senate congratulating the command sergeant major on the occasion of his retirement and extending to him the Senate's sincere gratitude for his dedication to the defense of our Nation. We wish him and his family only happiness in the years to come.●

TRIBUTE TO TERRY WOSTER

● Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Mr. President, today I wish, with great honor and pride, to pay tribute to a member of the Fourth estate in my home State of South Dakota. Terry Woster's career in journalism has spanned 44 years—an impressive mark in any profession, most certainly in the newspaper field.

Terry was born to Henry and Marie Woster and grew up on a farm near Reliance in Lyman County. He graduated from Chamberlain High School in 1962 and from South Dakota State University in 1966 with a degree in journalism. Terry grew up with two brothers and two sisters, fondly known as the Woster clan.

Terry married his high school sweetheart, Nancy Gust, after finishing college. Together they raised three children in Pierre.

Terry began his journalism career in 1967 at the Sioux Falls Argus Leader. He covered sports, wrote features, and was a photographer for 2 years before he went to work for the Associated Press in Pierre. After 9 years with the AP covering the Capitol and politics, Terry became editor of the Pierre Times and then managing editor for the Daily Capitol Journal. He became the Capitol reporter for the Argus Leader, a position he held for 22 years.

Readers of the Argus Leader, as well as other South Dakota newspapers, have become acquainted with Terry and his chosen topics through his weekly human interest columns. His writings accurately reflect life in South Dakota and have sometimes earned him the title of South Dakota's poet laureate.

South Dakotans have come to know the man who treasures his family, recounting many stories of growing up near Reliance, playing basketball for Chamberlain High, and boating on the Missouri River. He loves history, politics, and enjoyed going to work every day in Pierre where he got to know the Governors, legislators, and all who worked in the South Dakota State Capitol Building. His strong sense of community service was reflected in many ways including service on the Pierre Library Board.

Terry's journalism skills have earned him many prestigious awards over the years. The Argus Leader, South Dakota Farmers' Union, South Dakota Newspaper Association, and South Dakota Press Association have all presented him awards. He is the recipient of the Distinguished Alumnus Award from South Dakota State University.

Terry has authored and published three books, including "South Dakota 100," "The Woster Brothers' Brand," written with his brothers, Kevin and Jim, and "The Spirit of Sioux Falls."

South Dakotans of all political persuasions know Terry Woster as a fair and well-respected reporter. I am among those who have long valued Terry's political reporting, wit, and wisdom. I also am proud to call Terry a friend. We have shared our experience with prostate cancer and are proud of our wives who are breast cancer survivors.

Thank you, Terry, for sharing your career and personal life with the newspaper readers and the citizens of South Dakota, and congratulations on a career filled with professionalism and dedication. You can take great pride in your career achievements and accomplishments, and you are a true credit to the State of South Dakota.●

45TH ANNIVERSARY OF YOUTH AND FAMILY SERVICES

● Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize the 45th anniversary of Youth and Family Services, YFS, a wonderful nonprofit organization based in Rapid City, SD, that provides support services for children and families. YFS has steadily grown in the last 45 years to become a thriving center of support to more than 11,000 children and their families every year.

Beginning in 1965, the organization was known as Girls Club and was one of many organizations offering programs and services to children and families. With hard work and a devotion to serving others, Girls Club evolved into Youth and Family Services, growing dramatically to incorporate several programs that offered similar services. YFS is one of the most comprehensive youth development organizations in western South Dakota.

The available programs have been consistently expanded to encompass more of the community. Working closely with other organizations, YFS remains focused on fulfilling its mission statement to help children and their families be capable, caring, and contributing members of their communities. YFS is working to serve an additional 3,000 to 5,000 children and families by expanding programs within child obesity prevention, healthy eating, and fatherhood programming, along with many others. In these hard economic times, the programs offered are even more critical, and YFS is building a strong endowment to ensure that they can continue to serve.

I am proud to recognize Youth and Family Services and all the people who have made reaching its 45th anniversary a success. The goals of Youth and Family Services are praiseworthy. This organization plays a vitally important role in western South Dakota, and I am thankful for all the devoted citizens who make the programs possible.●

TRIBUTE TO FRANK WOODRUFF BUCKLES

● Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Mr. President, today I wish to pay tribute to Frank Woodruff Buckles on the occasion of his 110th birthday. Frank has gained fame as the last living World War I veteran in the United States and has humbly accepted praise on behalf of the veterans who have gone before him. His story, like that of so many of the doughboys, is one of patriotism. As a 16-year-old in 1917, Frank lied to a military recruiter about his age so that he could join the Army. Once overseas, Frank served as an ambulance driver in England and France. Following the Armistice, Frank was part of a company returning prisoners of war back to Germany.

During World War II, while working for a private shipping company in Manila, Frank spent 3 years and 2 months as a Japanese prisoner-of-war. He still has, to this day, the small tin cup that he ate his paltry meals out of during that time period.

While we appropriately honor Frank for his service to our country, we should also recognize him for his longevity. His 110 years of life are no doubt due to his dedication to fitness and his love of learning. Well into his hundreds, Frank was still doing 50 situps a day and driving both his car and his tractor. Frank's love of learning has led him to learn numerous foreign languages and read countless books.

Frank never intended to have the distinction of being the last American World War I veteran. As he has said, "I knew it would happen to somebody, but I didn't necessarily think it was going to be me." Mr. President, I think you will agree with me that Mr. Buckles has accepted this honor with grace and humility. We salute you today, Frank Buckles, and wish you the best on this special occasion.●

TRIBUTE TO DR. EDMOND DYAS

● Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, it is appropriate that we take a moment to note the passing of Dr. Edmond Dyas of Mobile, AL, who was one of Alabama's most famous athletes and an accomplished orthopedic surgeon. Dr. Dyas first came to my attention when I was a young Boy Scout thrilled with the opportunity to have the chance to attend Auburn University football games as an usher. He was one of my first heroes. He was an Auburn team leader, a three-time Academic All American and All American, the Southeastern Conference's top running back in 1960, and
